How to fix the sound on a westinghouse tv

Chosen Solution larry, first try to reset your TV. Disconnect it from AC power, then press and hold the power button on the TV, and not the remote, for 10 seconds. After another minute, plug the set back in and press power once. Then try the other sound out from your TV to a set of speakers etc. If that works, you know that your internal speakers are not working. If it does, it is most likely that the audio IC that drives the internal speakers has failed. It is common in these sets as they use inexpensive low powered amplifier ICs that heat up and fail. You can try to replace the IC, if you have the right tools and experience, or replace the mainboard, part number 1AA4810N260A0. The IC itself is LV4906 and the mainboard is available at places like this. Hope this helps, good luck. Previous Next Sort by votes Days later we turned the TV on and the sound reappeared. Decided to test the Soundbar on just to see if it play and sure enough it works. The sound went out again and the soundbar isn't kicking in. Is it an major internal issue within my tv? Please help! Try the sound bar on another TV. Try some other sound/speakers on the Westinghouse TV. Determine if the problem stays with the TV or follows the new soundbar. You can test the soundbar on other audio sources: e.g., a computer. Or any other source where audio connectivity can be established. The Soundbar works perfect, its the TV not allowing it to work i guess. When the sound came back in the tv, the soundbar worked. When the sound went out again. The soundbar no longer worked. Does the TV have its' own speakers. Use those speakers for awhile. See if they work or do not work in the same pattern. [Side bar: We have Xfinity and have noted that there are some Xfinity commercials that go "silent". Just no sound at all while the images seem normal. Sort of believe it is some gimmick to get attention. TBD...] Anyway, to help you, take a close look at the sound bar's connection to the TV: is the connection fully in place and solid? Have you been able to try another known working connection cable between TV and sound bar? Sounds like a TV issue to me. If there is a headphone jack on the tv, try plugging and unplugging a headphone plug into it. It's possible it's faulty and thinks something's plugged in thus stopping any other output, otherwise it sounds like an internal fault with the audio board Yes, the Soundbar is plugged in correctly. I don't think the Soundbar connection is the issue, especially if I heard it play at one point. I'm not thinking its the TV You must log in or register to reply here.
